Call for themes and papers:
Journal of Chinese for Social Science (JCSS)

The Journal of Chinese for Social Science (JCSS, Chinese Edition, ISSN 2633-9501 Print, ISSN 2633-9633 Online, DOI: https://doi.org/10.24103/jcss.cn) is now inviting submissions for its forthcoming Volumes 3 and 4 in 2024 and 2025. JCSS serves as a bilingual platform in Chinese and English, dedicated to examining the application of the Chinese language within the social sciences. The journal comprises three main sections: reading, writing, and translation, and is aimed at fostering a deeper understanding and dialogue between languages, cultures, and communities through its focus on translational studies.

We Are Seeking Contributions That:
- Examine the Use of Chinese in Social Science Contexts: Studies focusing on how the Chinese language is employed in social scientific research, including the challenges and strategies for achieving conceptual equivalence between English and Chinese.
- Highlight Translation Challenges and Solutions: Research that addresses the intricacies of translating social science terminologies, concepts, ideas, and thoughts, promoting intercultural dialogue and communication.
- Engage with Bilingual Elements: Papers that explore bilingualism in academic research and publication, particularly the dynamics between Chinese and English in conveying social scientific knowledge.
- Investigate 'Chinese for Social Science' (CSS): Studies that contribute to the understanding and development of CSS as a branch of 'Chinese for Specific Purposes' (CSP), including comparisons with other CSP branches like 'Chinese for science and technology' or 'business Chinese'.

Submission Guidelines:
- Submissions should align with the journal's focus on the use of the Chinese language in social science research and its translational aspects.
- For submission details, including format and length, please visit our submission portal.

We welcome your submissions that align with our mission to bridge linguistic and cultural gaps in social science research. For more information on submission guidelines and to contribute, please visit our website.

Join us to better understand the discourse and meanings in Chinese for Social Science.