

Call for themes and papers:

Journal of China in Global and Comparative Perspectives (JCGCP)

The Journal of China in Global and Comparative Perspectives (JCGCP, ISSN 2633-9544 Print, ISSN 2633-9552 Online, DOI: <https://doi.org/10.24103/jcgcp>) is currently seeking submissions for its upcoming volumes 11 and 12 in 2025 and 2026. As a platform for original multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary research, JCGCP explores China's role from global or comparative perspectives across a wide array of social and human sciences topics.

We welcome contributions that:

- Offer comparative research on China, examining its interactions and impact on global development, ideas, movements, networks, and systems.
- Present China as a case study to test universally applicable theories, or compare China with other countries or contexts, whether through historical or contemporary lenses.
- Explore perceptions between China and the rest of the world, including how China views others and how others view China, across political, economic, military, and cultural dimensions.
- Contrast Chinese and non-Chinese perspectives, encouraging dialogue between different viewpoints on a global stage.

Submission Types: Research articles, Research reports, Commentaries, Proposals for symposia on specific themes, In-depth review articles, Book reviews that offer significant insights into China's global and comparative study.

Special Issue Themes: We are particularly interested in proposals for special issues focusing on targeted themes. Please share your suggestions for themes that resonate with JCGCP's objectives and could foster scholarly discussion.

Submission Guidelines:

- Articles should be original and contribute to our understanding of China in global or comparative perspectives.
- Submissions must adhere to our publication ethics and peer-review process to ensure academic integrity.
- Detailed submission instructions are available on our website.

Important Information: For more information and to submit your paper or theme suggestion, please visit our website. Join us in advancing the discussion on China's significant role in the global context.

Join us in exploring China's impact around the world!